⁽²⁾Financial companies and real estate companies are excluded from the index universe. Companies in the index are screened based on average projected free cash flows and earnings (if available) over each of the next two fiscal years. Companies for which information on their projected free cash flows or earnings is not available will typically remain in the Index universe. Companies with negative average projected free cash flows or earnings are typically removed from the Index universe. The remaining companies are typically ranked by their free cash flow margin for the trailing twelve month period.

⁽³⁾Companies included in the index are weighted by their price momentum score. Price momentum is a speed of price changes in a security and shows the rate of price change over time to determine the extent of a trend.

*Source: US Bank and Bloomberg. ETF implied liquidity is a representation of how many shares can potentially be traded daily in an ETF as portrayed by the creation unit. This is defined as the smallest value of the IDTS (Implied Daily Tradable Shares) for each holding in the creation unit. ⁽²⁾Nasdaq, Solactive, FactSet. NAV (net asset value) is the value of one share of the Fund calculated daily. The NAV return is based on the NAV of the Fund. It may not reflect the actual return for the investor.

Market Price is the price investors can buy and sell ETF shares for in the stock market and is used to calculate market return. It is based on the price at the Nasdaq exchange market close. This is when NAV is determined for most ETFs. If shares trade at another time, the return may differ. Market and NAV returns assume that dividends and capital gain distributions have been reinvested in the Fund at Market Price and NAV, respectively.
