The NASDAQ-100® reached its all-time high of 26,799.61 on February 19, 2025. The Index is concentrated in 3 sectors with about 80% of its members categorized as information technology, communication services, and consumer discretionary. The NASDAQ-100®'s top three holdings, Apple, NVIDIA, and Microsoft, represent nearly 25% of the Index's weight.

- Technology

Though volatility is common of the tech sector, technology stocks are booming with the growth of the cloud industry. Demand is high for cloud-based services as companies from all sectors benefit from the accessibility they create.

- Communication Services

From search engines and social media to streaming and gaming, companies in this sector enable us to learn, work, and play together. Communication Services represent the current pinnacle of the "New Economy," and have grown phenomenally and developed their own economic moats.

- E-Commerce

E-commerce is expanding beyond its early adopters of online retailers and is poised to grow. Business-to-business companies recognize the importance of e-commerce capabilities in their practice and continue to develop these technologies.
